

The FDA and CDC have approved a second booster (Pfizer or Moderna) for some people. Who is eligible?

- Anyone age 50+ who received their first booster more than 4 months ago, especially if they
 - are over age 65
 - are part of a racial or ethnic minority group
 - have an underlying chronic health condition (diabetes, lung disease, cancer, kidney disease)
 - are inactive
 - are overweight or obese
- Anyone age 18+ who received a J&J vaccine and a J&J booster dose more than 4 months ago
- Anyone age 12+ who has had an organ transplant or is severely immunocompromised who received their first booster more than 4 months ago

* When you get a booster vaccine, your body's immune system fires up again. You may experience symptoms including pain at the injection site, tiredness, headache, muscle and/or joint pain, chills, swollen lymph nodes (glands) in same arm as the injection, nausea and vomiting, and fever. These are normal responses.
